3.2.4.1 Selecting review outcomes. Broad outcome domains are decided at the time of setting up the review PICO (see Chapter 2). Once the broad domains are agreed, further specification is required to define the domains to facilitate reporting and synthesis (i.e. the PICO for comparison) (see Chapter 2, Section 2.3). The process for specifying

Most of us assume quite reasonably that as we look at a hill, for example, the steepness of the incline in our visual image is more or less the steepness of the hill in the world. The reality, however, is that the incline is far less steep than it appears (most people perceive a 5 degree hill to be 20 degrees or more) [1 , 2].
